What the programme does and does not provide

Understand the programme’s purpose and boundaries.

This programme offers independent journalism, practical guidance, links to authoritative sources and a voluntary route to seek specialist contact. It is not individual engineering approval, fire-safety certification, legal advice, an emergency response service or evidence of compliance with every regulation. Local responsibility, competent professional input and suitable records remain essential.

The programme may be supported by a disclosed nominated business telecommunications partner. Sponsorship must not change the factual standard, remove alternative official guidance or oblige a provider to accept contact in order to read or download resources.
